Royal Society of NSW Scholarships

The Royal Society of New South Wales is the oldest scientific society in Australia, tracing its history back to 1821. It has a long tradition of encouraging and supporting scientific research and leading intellectual life in the State. The Council of the Royal Society has decided to fund the Royal Society of New South Wales Scholarship in order to acknowledge outstanding achievements by individuals working in a science related field.

Applications for Royal Society of New South Wales Scholarships are sought from candidates working in a science related field within New South Wales. There is no restriction with respect to field of study and up to three Scholarships will be awarded each year. Applicants must be Australian citizens or Permanent Residents of Australia. Applicants must be enrolled in a bona fide tertiary course at a University in NSW.

There is no application form but your application should include a statement of the significance of your work particularly within the broader context of your chosen field, an abstract of your work (ca 500 words), and a brief curriculum vitae, including details of your professional experience. Be sure to enclose a list of your publications. The closing date for applications is 31st July of each year. The applications will be considered by a selection committee appointed by the Council of the Society and the decision will be made before the end of August. The decision of the committee is final. The Scholarships will be awarded on merit.

The award consists of an engraved plaque acknowledging your achievement, a $500 prize and a free year of membership of the Society. The winners will be expected to deliver a short presentation of their work at the Monthly Meeting of the Society in December and prepare a paper for the Society's journal. The awards will be presented at this meeting.
